

CHIEF'S CAVIAR & CAVEAT ...

Let me, first of all, congratulate you, my dear probationers, for the outstanding performance at the parade, put up by all of you, this morning. I also congratulate you for your illustrious success in the 44-week basic training, getting concluded now. The results of your examinations - periodical tests as also the final examination - in indoor studies as well as outdoor subjects, are impressive, and are there for anyone to see. What, indeed, is even more gratifying for us in the faculty is your overall - and all-so-very-visible -orientation in the professional values of the Service - ethical conduct, responsible behaviour, ability to distinguish between right and wrong, and a strong sense of service to the people. We feel, indeed, proud to witness your progress and strides towards professionalism. We can see with our own eyes how much you have achieved in the intervening 10 months.

You, who are at the end of your basic training now, and at the threshold of your careers in the police service, should also be very proud about your accomplishments, as also excited about what lies ahead, as you begin your new journey after stepping out of the portals of the Academy. Perhaps you are also a bit nervous or apprehensive. If so, that's understandable and even good, for one does not choose lightly to take on the special responsibilities to the society, the like of which are borne by a police officer.

There is no profession more virtuous, more noble, than the police profession. "Noble" is defined in the Oxford Advanced Learner's Dictionary as 'having fine personal qualities that people admire, such as courage, honesty, and care for others'. These are the qualities you have to demonstrate every time you deal with the public in carrying out your duties - Courage, Honesty, Care for others - and above all, upholding and enforcing the laws of the land, equally for all.

You chose to be courageous when you accepted the challenge of becoming a police officer. As a police officer, you will act courageously every moment, as a matter of duty. Ordinary citizens can choose to act otherwise, in circumstances of personal risk and danger. You can not. It is your duty to act, and always act courageously, in defence of others.

Perhaps the most important quality of a professional police officer is to be trusted and respected by the people he or she serves. I entreat each one of you to earnestly strive for, and win such respect of the people of your jurisdictions.

You must never hold anything - even yourself - above the law. You must have the courage to stand up against all those who, by their actions or directions, might damage the reputation and character of your Service.

Care for others - the third ingredient of noble behaviour should serve as a reminder that not all your duties involve only enforcement of law. Many of your most important acts, each day, should be acts of kindness and assistance to those in the society, who are most vulnerable, and most needy. Members of minorities, children, the elderly, the handicapped, destitute, the homeless - these are the people who will rely on you to protect them, and to offer aid and assistance to them, in different situations. This is the compassionate side of your duty, as a police officer. Remember that you are, now on, in the service of the Nation and service of the society.

Never ever forget that you work for the people of the country. They - from the most influential to the most humble - are your masters, your employers. Work always to uphold and defend laws without distinction or discrimination. Work always to protect human rights and dignity of individuals, and democratic values of the country. Remember that the police are the front line of defence for these values. You can, and I know you will, make a difference for the future of the country.

As law enforcement officers of the 21st century, you will face some very tough challenges - some of them very different from all the previous challenges, and some of the same hues as have existed, all these years. The monster of terrorism has repeatedly been rising like a phoenix, and making its presence felt in the country - indeed, the world over. In addition, phenomena like cyber crime have been presenting new and unique challenges, while the ever-present organized crime has been rearing its ugly head in growing magnitude and more complex dimensions. Of course, traditional crime, such as thefts, and robberies will always be there. So, when the going gets tough (and it will)...when the compensation, the pay and benefits seem trivial (and they will, trust me)...when someone begins talking to you about the wisdom of the choice you made (and they will)...remember what I have told you today and think of this day. Your Director standing in front of you, telling you that the police profession is above any second thoughts, it is the noblest of all professions; it is more noble than trivial compensation; and it's worth much, much more than a token effort on your part in the ocean of service by all your colleagues, the men in uniform, all over the country.

I wish you good luck. I hope and trust, in your career in Police Service, you will find personal and professional satisfaction and pride in your service, on a day-to-day basis.

Remember, to always make those who care about you, proud. Always uphold the responsibility of your profession, even in the face of overwhelming personal or professional odds. Be on time for any assignment. Wear your uniform with pride. The road ahead will not always be easy but the ultimate reward will be great: a nation where freedom endures; a country where people are safe on the streets and in their homes, a society which holds its head high and looks at the man in uniform as a friend. A nation, where the police are a partner in national development, as envisaged by President APJ Abdul Kalam in the Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel Memorial Lecture at our Academy, you heard the other day.

Also, always remember Sardar Patel, the Founder of your Alma Mater, had high hopes from the Academy's alumni. Do everything that will make your alma mater proud of you. In ancient Indian tradition, there is a concept of Guru Dakshina, which is an offering made by the disciples to the Guru, upon the completion of Diksha. Your alma mater would feel proud to receive a Guru Dakshina from you in the form of a solemn assurance that you will do everything possible, to take the flag of the Indian Police Service to greater and ever-greater heights. You would be passing out from the Academy, the day after tomorrow. Your parade, today, was of a very high standard and was witnessed by only the faculty and staff of the Academy. The Parade on the 5th November would be witnessed not just by the Union Home Minister but several other guests, including your parents, your brothers, your sisters, wife or fiancée. Try and put up an excellent show on that day too, so that your near and dear ones genuinely feel proud of you.

I once again congratulate you for the successful completion of the first phase of your training here, and wish you Godspeed for greater heights of success in the rest of the training schedule in the States of your allotment and, indeed, for greater and greater milestones of glory in a promising career ahead.

God Bless you. Jai Hind.

REPORT OF DIRECTOR

Hon'ble Home Minister of India, Shri Shivraj V Patil; Hon'ble Home Minister of Andhra Pradesh, Shri K Jana Reddy; Hon'ble Minister for Labour & Employment, Andhra Pradesh, Shri G Vinod; Distinguished Invitees; Members of the Print & Visual Media; Dear Probationers, Ladies and Gentlemen.

It is my proud privilege to extend, on behalf of the Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel National Police Academy, on behalf of all my colleagues in the Academy, and on my own behalf, a very hearty welcome to all of you, at this 'Passing Out Parade' of the 57th Batch of IPS Probationers, along with officer-trainees of the Maldivian Police and the Royal Bhutan Police.

I am extremely grateful to the Hon'ble Union Home Minister, Shri Shivraj V Patil, who so very kindly accepted our invitation to be the Chief Guest at today's Passing Out Parade, despite inordinate pressures and demands on his time, and his onerous responsibilities as the Home Minister of the country, in these times. Sir, I am, indeed, extremely grateful to you for this gesture, which is but a reflection of your keen and abiding interest in police in general, and police training in particular, which is so vitally linked with the efficient functioning of the police as an instrument of public service. I am sure, that the young officers passing out today as well as their parents and near and dear ones, who are present here, would feel proud and honoured by your august presence, at this Parade.

We are particularly delighted to also have in our midst, on this occasion, Hon'ble Home Minister of Andhra Pradesh, Shri K Jana Reddy and Hon'ble Minister for Labour & Employment, Andhra Pradesh, Shri G Vinod. We are, indeed, grateful to you Sirs for your kind presence here today. I also take this opportunity to extend a warm welcome to the former Director of this Academy, Shri Sankar Sen, Director, Intelligence Bureau; Shri ESL Narasimhan, Director General, Border Security Force; Shri RS Mooshahary, Director General, National Security Guard & Special Secretary (Home), Shri Ashish Mitra, Director General, Narcotics Control Bureau, Shri KC Verma, Director General of Police, Haryana, Shri Kanwar Nirmal Singh; Director General of Police, Andhra Pradesh, Shri Swaranjit Sen; and other distinguished invitees including senior police officers - both serving and retired - whose presence at this programme provides a great source of encouragement to us. A very special welcome to the parents, spouses and other relatives of the probationers.

Sir, participating in the parade, this morning, are 76 IPS probationers, including 6 lady officers, of the 57th batch of the Indian Police Service, 4 officer-trainees of the Maldivian Police Service and 2 of the Royal Bhutan Police. The batch had joined this Academy on the 27th of December, 2004. During the past 44 weeks, the Academy has strived hard and given its best, in imparting training to these probationers, the requisite knowledge and skills, needed for efficient policing, and also to make them tough enough for the rigours of police work in different situations. It has also been our endeavour to inculcate in them the highest standards of professional integrity and rectitude, and sensitivity to the needs and aspirations of the people, particularly those belonging to the vulnerable sections. Concepts of Human Rights and Social Justice have been the core elements of the training curriculum.

Basic training inputs for them comprised exposure to the laws of the land - substantive and procedural law as well as the law of evidence - criminology, crime investigation, forensic science and forensic medicine, maintenance of peace and public order, phenomenon like Terrorism, Militancy, Extremism, etc., Principles of management, leadership and police ethics, to name a few. Apart from training for physical fitness, the officers have been also given adequate inputs on skills of weapon handling, rock climbing, equitation, swimming and yoga. We have made constant effort to improve and update our training, to keep abreast with the changing needs of policing on the ground.

The National Police Academy, in its 57 years of existence, has constantly strived to translate the dream of its founder, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel - the Iron Man of India - to achieve its due status as the premier police training institution of the country. The Academy has, indeed, acquired a name for itself for excellence in police training not only nationally but internationally too.

During the past one year, apart from the basic training programme for IPS probationers, the Academy conducted a good number of in-service courses - as many as 33 programmes - for senior IPS officers and officers of other Internal Security organizations, to upgrade their professional knowledge and skills in various subjects and themes of topical and developing importance, ranging from Organised Crime, Economic Offences, Investigation of Frauds and Scams to Computer & Internet Crime, from Human Rights & Gender Justice to National Security, from Police-Media Interface to Investigation of Anti-Corruption Cases, and so on. New In-Service Courses were introduced this year on the themes of "Internal Security & Day-to-Day Policing" & "Police Leadership & the Political Environment".

Apart from these, the Academy also organized specialized, short-term courses for the probationers of the Indian Revenue Service (Customs & Central Excise), Indian Forest Service & the Indian Railway Traffic Service, on police-related aspects of their work, such as Investigation, Arrests, Search & Seizure, etc.

The Academy has developed a highly advanced "Training of Trainers' Wing", which organizes courses in Training Methodology, and other facets of training for police trainers from all over the country, to equip them with skills, necessary and appropriate for police training. We now also conduct Induction Courses for officers of the State Police Services who have been promoted to the IPS.

The Academy has emerged as a center for research on police subjects. Police officers and others take up research projects on police-related subjects, under the aegis of the Academy. The output of such research has been helpful not only to us here in the Academy, in modifying our training curricula, methodology, etc., as necessary, but do prove useful as well, to field officers in improving their efficiency in handling complex problems of different varieties, in day-to-day police work..

The Academy has also established a web-based police training network, linking all the police training institutions of the country - called POTNET - so that different institutions could draw upon the training resources, experiences and innovative practices, of each other, for mutual benefit. The Academy is vigorously pursuing this initiative, in furtherance of its mission to emerge as a hub of coordination between all police training institutions of the country.

Sir, allow me the liberty to use this opportunity also to compliment all the members of the faculty and staff of the Academy for their commendable commitment, devotion to duty, and tireless effort in pursuit of the ideals of the institution, as envisaged by the founder of the Academy - the great Sardar. My compliments also to the probationers who stood up to the rigorous demands of police training and came out with flying colours. It gratifies me to mention that we have been impressed by the sincerity and keenness of these young officers. Indeed, the nation has great expectations from them to provide selfless service to the people and imaginative leadership to police forces, to attain the cherished goal of making the police true friends and protectors of law-abiding citizens. I wish the probationers all success and fulfilment in their career.

The Academy is grateful to the Ministry of Home Affairs, particularly the Union Home Minister, for their constant guidance and benevolent support. We look forward to continued encouragement from them, in times to come.

With these words, I thank you, once again, Sir, for being with us today. May I now request you kindly to distribute the medals and trophies to the awardee probationers.

Thank you Sir.

DIKSHANT PARADE 2005

Speech of Shri Shivraj V Patil Hon'ble Home Minister of India, during the Passing out Parade of 57 RR Basic Course Probationers

Shri Kamal Kumar, Director of the Academy, Distinguished Guests from all over the country, Members of the Faculty, Dear young Probationers & their families, Ladies and Gentlemen,

The Passing Out Parade is a very important occasion that every uniformed officer cherishes all his life. I am delighted to be here today and to witness this parade by the future leaders of the Indian Police. I am also happy that 2 Royal Bhutan Police Service Officers and 4 Maldivian Officers are also passing out, along with Indian IPS Officers. The bonds that they have built here will no doubt strengthen the bonds between our nations. My congratulations to all of you.

On this occasion, we all proudly remember Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, the great visionary after whom the Academy is named. It was the Sardar, who had visualized the need for an all India cadre of professional and committed officers to lead the Police, Security and Intelligence Organizations in the Independent India. The stellar role played by the Indian Police Service, in preserving the unity and integrity of the country, by fighting the evil designs of subversive forces, is, indeed, a great tribute to the vision of the great statesman. As you pass out of the National Police Academy, I am sure, the core values that the Academy has strived to inculcate in you, would inspire each one of you to undertake even the toughest of tasks for meeting the formidable challenges before the nation.

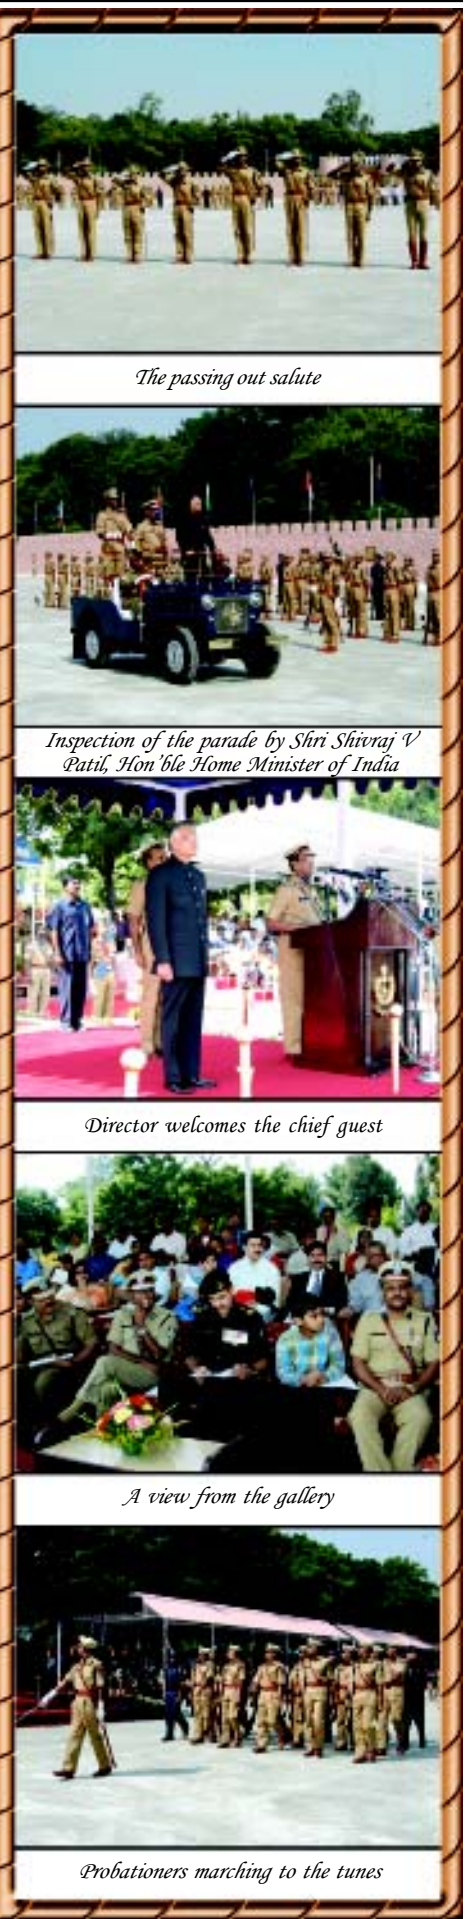

Policing any democratic country is a complex and sensitive affair, requiring delicate balancing of divergent considerations. There is on one side the need to maintain order, to enforce the laws, and to prevent and detect crime; on the other, are factors such as the imperative of respecting the citizen's fundamental rights to freedom of speech, association and peaceable assembly.

There is, in addition, the expectation of the citizens that under all circumstances, their feelings and susceptibilities, as well as their rights, shall be respected but there is no general recognition that some restrictions on the rights of individuals and some inconvenience to them are the price to be paid for the good of the society.

The police is the first representative of the state, in helping the citizens in day-to-day situations of crime and disturbance of peace and public order, traffic accidents, even natural and man-made disasters. Criminal justice systems, across the world are under strain today. Most countries are facing the phenomenon of rising crime. All are grappling also with new forms of crime and criminality. The tasks of the police are getting more and more complex and difficult.

With growing complexity of police tasks, police training has to be constantly updated and upgraded. I am happy to find that the National Police Academy regularly reviews the training curricula of its various courses, in a scientific manner, and reorients the same to the ever-changing needs of field work.

The emergence of the Information Society, accompanied by the knowledge explosion, poses a definitive challenge for the police leaderships. This will require of the police greatly extending the frontiers of their knowledge in the professional, technological and intellectual spheres. Police and law enforcement agencies will, no longer, be able to limit themselves to effecting incremental improvements in routine police tasks and responsibilities.

The passing out salute

The threats of terrorism, communal strife, violent conflicts and organized crimes are the most important concerns in policing today. The gravity and pervasiveness of the threat posed by terrorism has been brought home once again, recently. Thousands of Indian citizens have lost their lives, in the recent decades, as a direct result of terrorism. India has consistently maintained that terrorism constitutes to be one of the most serious threats, not only to peace and security of the society but to civilized society itself, and has to be dealt, with grit and determination. You are going to be in the vanguard of this fight. This grave challenge has to be met squarely, and with uncompromising professional zeal and indomitable spirit. You have to do so while always upholding the principles of rule of law and the democratic and constitutional values, cherished by the Indian nation.

Ensuring the rights of all weaker sections - minorities, women, children and the like - is another solemn responsibility of the police. All policemen, particularly those at the cutting-edge level, have to be sensitive in dealing with these sections. There must be compassion and empathy for the victim and a firm resolve to take effective legal action against the perpetrators of crime. What is needed is a combination of determination and professional competence in handling such issues. I call upon each one of you to also do your best towards prevention of crimes against all vulnerable sections of the society.

Hon'ble President of India, during his recent visit here, had desired that the Academy should play a crucial role as a research centre for solving the problems of policing in the field. He particularly wanted studies to be undertaken on issues, such as, special problems of particular regions and psychology of the personnel working in different situations. I am sure that the Academy will take vigorous action in this regard, which would benefit the police forces of the entire country. The Government will be happy to extend all support in such endeavors of the Academy.

There exists a widespread feeling that the police and government agencies mostly remain too remote from the people. Society has created the police for its protection. Public have great stakes in the police performing their duties effectively and it is for the police to enlist the people's cooperation. There is vast potential help available in the community which the police must tap. It is the police leadership which has to show the way to the force, of eliciting the cooperation of the public, in tackling problems, be of communal riot situations or outbreak of conventional crime. A lasting solution to most such problems, in fact, cannot be achieved without the active cooperation of the people. You must always keep in mind that any alienation of the people from the police will ultimately help anti-social elements and vested interests only. Also, when it comes to the police, without the cooperation of the public in your work, professional success would be elusive. So, Let us always try to enlist the cooperation of the people.

As you step out of your Alma Mater today, in the service of the nation, always keep in mind the ethical values the Academy has strived to inculcate in you, during your training. If you plant honesty, you will reap trust, if you plant humility, you will reap greatness, if you plant perseverance, you will reap victory and if you plant hard work, you will reap success. So, make total commitment to whatever you are doing, your motto. There are no shortcuts to success. "Be the change you want to see in the world", said Gandhiji, the Father of the Nation. Lead by example. I wish each one of you a bright, successful and a rewarding career in Police Service.

I congratulate the Director, Shri Kamal Kumar, the members of the faculty and all the probationers for putting up an impressive performance today.

My best wishes to you for a rewarding and fruitful career in public service.

Jai Hind.

On completion of Phase - I training, the probationers passed out of the Academy on 5th November, 2005.

OUTDOOR SECTION

The Probationers of 57 RR reported on 22.12.2004 in the Academy for their Basic training. In the Zero Week from 22.12.04 to 27.12.2004, they were shown various demonstrations on Firing, UAC, PT, Riding, Drill and Outdoor subjects, in which apart from Outdoor staff, the faculty members also participated.

The probationers showed their hard work and dedication by putting up an excellent performance in the Republic Day Parade on 26.01.2005. In spite of being just three weeks into of their basic training, they had put up a colourful march past. Shri Vinay Kumar commanded the parade. Six platoons of Probationers and two constable platoons participated in the parade. Shri. Lakhmi Gautam, Shri Preetinder Singh, Shri Agnihotri Sonal Mohan, Capt. Tsulthrim Dorji, Shri K A Senthil Velan, Shri Satya Narayan, Ms Ruchika Rishi and Ms KB Vandna commanded the platoons.

A Rock-climbing module was organized for the 57RR w.e.f 14.02.05 to 19.02.2005. A team from ITBP conducted the module. The probationers learnt various types of rappelling and climbing such as seat rappelling, free rappelling, stomach rappelling, side rappelling, shoulder rappelling, piggy-back, three-point climbing, knotted climbing, jummar climbing, chimney climbing etc. For the first time, probationers were taken to the Himayat Sagar Dam where they practiced all types of rappelling on the 65 feet high dam wall.

As many as 6 Route marches of various distances ranging from 10-30 kms were organized. The aim of these route marches was to help the probationers improve their endurance limits and learn tactical exercises enroute such as exercises on Ambush, so that they are sensitized to need for proper formations, command and control during naxalite area patrolling. During route marches they were also shown various sites of tactical importance in which they planned and conducted briefings of various operations such as Ambush, Combing, Raid, Cordon and Search, etc, on cloth models. A Battle inoculation exercise was also conducted at Army firing range on 16.08.2005, in which Probationer came to know about the environment of a shoot out and experienced the thrill of bullet passing in close vicinity.

Probationers were shown Demonstrations on following subjects before they were asked to plan tactical exercises.

- (i) Patrolling & Section Battle drill
- (ii) Cordon and search
- (iii) Patrolling and counter ambush
- (iv) Raid on a hide out
- (v) Penetration power of small arms ammunition
- (vi) Transition drill and room intervention
- (vii) Ambush and Recovery
- (viii) Road block and search of vehicle and person.

An inter squad and individual Artificial wall climbing competition was held for the 57RR on 14.03.2005. 4 probationers from each squad participated in the Inter-squad competition. Squad 6 secured the first position by taking minimum time to negotiate the two faces of the wall. In the individual competition, Shri Mitesh Jain of squad 6 secured 1st position by climbing the left face in record timing of 1 minute 12 seconds, leaving behind Shri Tarun Joshi of squad 6 by 0.36 seconds only.

Probationers were taken to Kaudiyala, Rishikesh and Hardwar for Water Sports and Law & Order Module respectively. The water sports module was organized by Garhwal Mandal Vikas Nigam w.e.f. 09.04.05 to 12/04/05, in which probationers learnt River Rafting and Kayaking. On the final day, i.e., on 12.04.05 the probationers covered almost 24 Kms in Raft all the way from Kaudiyala to Rishikesh. It was a real adventure to negotiate the WALL (Water turns sharply after being pushed back by rock) where two rafts turned upside down. Probationers enjoyed doing body Surfing in gradual waves. Rapids named Golf Course, Roller Coaster etc provided unforgettable experience and great adventure to the probationers at many places, when the waves threw the Rafters out of the Raft in to the blizzard of waves.

A reflex shooting module was conducted w.e.f 18.04.05 to 23.04.2005 for the Probationers by the Tamilnadu Police team. Two officers from Border Security Force, Shri RBDeshmukh, Dy. Comdt (Retd) and Shri GKS Gautam, Dy Comdt, were instrumental in conducting the module as they have been conducting this module for the last 7-8 years. Presence of Shri K Vijay Kumar, Addl D.G.P, Tamilnadu, during the module was a major inspiration for the Probationers. The entire module was conducted under his guidance.

The Batch displayed excellent esprit-de-corps during the inter squad matches, annual athletic meet, aquatic meet, final cross-country and wherever the competition was squad wise. During Annual Aquatic Meet, Shri Sanjay Kumar, the Best Swimmer of the year, won the AS Brar Trophy and established the new Academy records in the following events.

PASSING OUT PARADE WEEK

The Passing Out Parade Week of the 57th RR batch of IPS Probationers set to roll on 02.11.2005. The special week programmes started with Service Dinner on 2.11.2005 in the IPS Mess of the Academy. The second day witnessed the Director's Parade followed by garlanding of the Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel statue. The same day, Training Managers' Workshop also started in the AP Conference Hall of the Academy, which was followed by a colourful cultural programme presented by the IPS Probationers in the Academy Auditorium. On 4.11.2005, a Guest Night for the guests of the IPS Probationers was held at Vallabh Vatika. On 5th November, 2005, the Passing Out Parade of the 57RR batch IPS Probationers was held with great fanfare, in which the Union Home Minister, Shri Shivraj V Patil, took the salute of the Probationers.

TRAINING MANAGERS' WORKSHOP

The Training Manager's Workshop was held on November 3, 2005, under the chairmanship of Shri Kamal Kumar, Director, NPA, to discuss the implementation of PoTNet and making practical training of IPS Probationers more meaningful and relevant. A total of 12 officers from various State cadres and Central Police Organizations attended this Workshop, apart from the faculty members of the National Police Academy. The Officers who participated in this Workshop include Shri Chandra Sekhar, ADGP, Punjab Police Academy, Phillaur; Shri VN Rai, ADGP/Director, Haryana Police Academy; Shri TK Bhattacharyya, IGP (Trg.), West Bengal; Shri UK Lal, IGP, PTC, Sagar, Madhya Pradesh; Dr. Sudhakar Jauhari, IGP, SCRB, Jaipur, Rajasthan; Shri MS Jaffar Sait, IGP (Trg.), Chennai, Tamil Nadu; Shri T Krishna Prasad, IGP (Trg.), AP Police Academy, Andhra Pradesh; Shri D. REUNION SEMINAR OF 1955 RR BATCH OF IPS OFFICERS

In his address to the Directors General of Police of the States and Heads of Central Police Organisations in October this year, the Prime Minister had mentioned that the time had come to take a fresh look at the policing requirements of the country and provide it with a New Vision. The Prime Minister outlined that our economic programmes and development were contingent upon upholding the rule of law and that the Police had a vital role in ensuring the nation's development. This would necessitate a quantum jump in the thinking of, and planning for, the Police to enable it to have a better comprehension of current and future problems. The Prime Minister therefore had announced the setting up of a National Police Mission, which would help equip the Police to meet future threats and challenges.

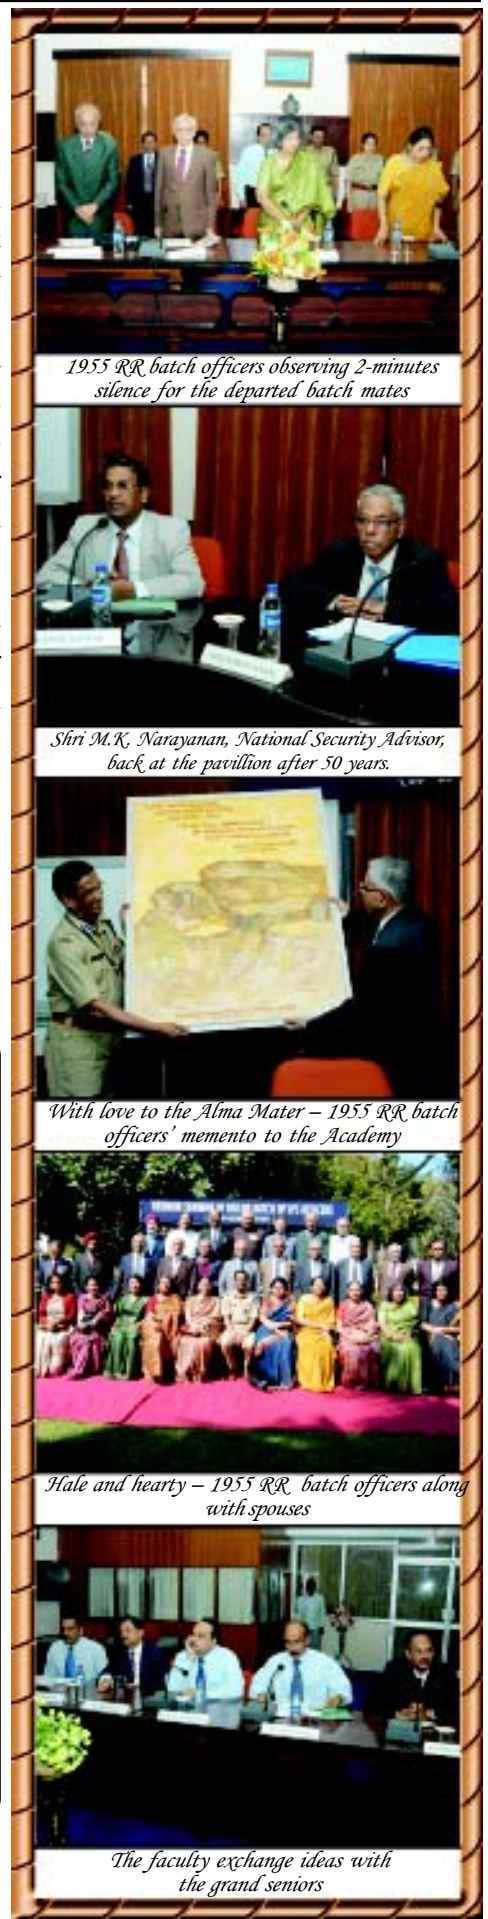

The 'Old Boys' of 1955 R.R. batch of I.P.S. selected the theme of Seminar as "Proposed National Police Mission: Opportunity & Tasks" for deliberation at their reunion seminar held at the Academy on December 29-30-2005. 18 Retired Officers of 1955 RR batch participated in the Seminar.

The participating officers also had interactions on the seminar theme with the IPS Probationers as well as the NPA faculty.

At the conclusion of the seminar, the batch presented a paper "National Police Mission: An Outline".

"...Our police force needs to be a friendly, corruption free, responsible, tolerant to ambiguity and pressure, caring for the people with a sense of compassion and empathy, able to create confidence and win over the hearts of the people, be efficient and time conscious, stress tolerant, mentally and physically fit and robust, able to provide high quality leadership potential at all levels of hierarchy and be a model for conduct and discipline..."
